Caleb Powell believes Milan Kundera had it right when he wrote, "Happiness is looking forward to repetition," and therefore beats to death Bukowski's "we must bring our own light to the darkness/ no one is going to do it for us." Ever since creating the phrase "I swear on the Booble," Caleb is driving his wife crazy. On the writing front, he is the author of The World is a Class, a reference guide drawing on his experiences overseas. He has placed essays, stories, and a novel as finalists in the William Faulkner-William Wisdom Writing Competition. His work has been published or is forthcoming in flashquake, elima, and Descant. Visit him at <http://calebpowell.wordpress.com/>.
